

This comment is in regards to the aquaculture alternative feeds:

Micro and macroalgae are now being considered for use to produce biofuels and biodiesel.

Wouldn't the oil extracted from algae be more valuable as an additive to fish feeds and would it not have the proper balance of essential FA's and omega-3s?

I think this topic, algae culture for oils, should be included in aquaculture alternative feeds research and development.

Sincerely,

Skip Kemp

Philip S. Kemp Jr.

Aquaculture Technology Program

Carteret Community College