

Since melamine was found in fish feeds during 2007, being used to make feeds appear to have higher protein content, it is important that any research involving fish feed protein content and utilization be analyzed for triazines. It would also be imperative that protein be measured using amino acid analysis not just looking for nitrogen content in the feed or feed ingredients.

Renate Reimschuessel